Affective Influences on the Attentional Dynamics Supporting Awareness Adam K. Anderson University of Toronto Identification of a 1st target stimulus in a rapid serial visual presentation sequence leads to transient impairment in report for a 2nd target; this is known as the attentional blink (AB). This AB impairment

Affective Influences on the Attentional Dynamics

Affective dynamics is an important phenomenon that has not received much emphasis, so tests of the predictions pertaining to affective transitions is an important step in validating the model. An analysis at an even finer level of granularity would involve simultaneously testing both the predicted transitions as well as the events that are hypothesized to trigger these transitions.

Playing with Ideas The Affective Dynamics of Creative Play Pat Power Through an integrated investigation of emotion, play, and creativity, this interdisciplinary study analyzes the affective nature of playfulness, explores it as feeling or attitude in an adult context, and maps its relationship to the creative process.

ened affective instability (Pfaltz, Michael, Grossman, Margraf, & Wilhelm, 2010). Therefore, a compelling question is the degree to which individual differences in anxiety and depression can be accounted for by unique temporal dynamics of positive and negative affect. Figure 1.

Extending B. L. Fredrickson's (1998) broaden-and-build theory of positive emotions and M. Losada's (1999) nonlinear dynamics model of team performance, the authors predict that a ratio of positive to negative affect at or above 2.9 will characterize individuals in flourishing mental health.

Positive Affect and the Complex Dynamics of Human Flourishing

Parallel to the research on affective instability, a number of studies have examined individual differences specifically focusing on the temporal dependency component of affective dynamics. Greater temporal dependency of affect over time reflects a tendency for affect to be highly predictable from moment-to-moment.

Affective Dynamics Zita Oravecz, Francis Tuerlinckx, and Joachim Vandekerckhove University of Leuven In this article a continuous-time stochastic model (the Ornstein-Uhlenbeck process) is presented to model the perpetually altering states of the core affect, which is a 2-dimensional concept underlying all our affective experiences.
